OIL COMPANY GOES INTO RECEIVER'S

Hands in Oklahoma City. Practically Owned by Kentuckians.

Attorney C. Mercer Represents Stockholders.

On the 12th of August, at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Claude Mercer, attorney representing the stockholders in the Kenthoma Oil Company, made a motion in the District Court in Oklahoma County for the appointment of a Receiver to take charge of the assets and property of the said Oil Company. The grounds for a Receiver was the improper management of its assets by Mr. R. H. Yates and C. W. Morgan, both of Louisville, Kentucky, who had charge of the property.

Under the direction of those gentlemen the Kenthoma Oil Company had recently sold a 90 acre lease to the American-Industrial Oil Company, of Oklahoma, for the sum of $80,000.00. Another valuable lease upon which the Oil Company had expended about $25,000.00 in development is claimed to have been forfeited by the Kenthoma Oil Company within the last few weeks.

The stockholders were wholly unable to get satisfactory reports of the condition of said company by those in charge, and in fact, had never received a financial statement of its affairs. Upon a showing of this to the District Court of Oklahoma County, Oklahoma, Judge Clark promptly took the property out of the hands of the aforesaid gentlemen and placed it in the hands of a Receiver.

It is impossible at this juncture to know what the stockholders will receive, as their attorney, Mercer, reports that this time he is unable to estimate the value of the assets or its condition, other than that the payment of $45,000.00 is the balance due by the American-Industrial Oil Company, and that will be paid to the Receiver.

The stock of this company is owned exclusively in Kentucky, except a block in Texas. As soon as a preliminary report of the Receiver is made some definite idea of what will be saved for the stockholders will be had.

SCHOOL NEWS

AND VIEWS

By J. Raleigh Meador, Superintendent.

CSHOOI NEWS
In communities where whooping cough is prevalent the teacher and trustee should make an effort to keep out of school those known to have been exposed. Children should not be permitted to attend school after the fifth day following exposure, unless of course exposure occurred at school. Where the whole school has been exposed it is too late for precautions.

Teachers will be called upon to assist in advertising and selling the Fourth Liberty Loan. They should begin now to make up a list of prospective buyers in the district. Why not every school district in the county buy in the name of the school a $50 or $100 Bond? Many districts have already done this. On the opening day of the drive let each district have some kind of entertainment and make an effort to raise the $50 or $100. It will help to advertise the opening and will be a long step toward our county's quota.

Then when the bonds mature every district will have a fund of its own. Now all together—one, two, three, go!

The September examination for teachers certificates will be held at Hardinsburg on Sept. 20 and 21. Examination for colored teachers on the following Friday and Saturday, Sept. 27 and 28.

The following salary schedule has been adopted for the school year of 1918-19.

Emergency schools, $35 to $38 per month according to grade of certificate. Second class, $45 to $50 per month according to grade of certificate. First class, $50 to $55 per month according to grade of certificate. Two-Teacher school, $55 to $56 per month for Prin. and $35 to $33 per month for assistant according to grade of certificate. For four years experience add $1.00 per month. For completing Reading Circle add $1.00 per month. For four years High School add $2.00 per month. For ten-week terms at State Normal or University add $1.00 per month. For Av. attendance of 65 per cent of census for term add $1.00 per month.

A first class school is one having 75 or more pupils. A second class has between 50 and 75, and an emergency school is one having fewer than 50 pupils.

After this week my office at Hardinsburg will be open on Monday's and Saturday's only, as I shall be out among the schools on other days of the week.

Moorman and Bobtown districts raised money by subscription and put down deep wells to furnish water for the school. The County Board at its last meeting authorized the purchase of pumps for these districts. A drilled well, if properly cared for will solve the water question for schools.

amount that may be apportioned Breckinridge County for the year 1919 then in that case the Fiscal Court of Breckinridge County requests the proportionate amount of the State Road Fund that may be apportioned to Breckinridge County.

WITH THE HOME BOYS IN SERVICE

Encamped in a French Village.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Dix, of Steph-ensport, have recently had an entertaining letter from their son, Wm.
H. Dix, who when he wrote was in a French village and enjoying the French and English people. He writes:

Dear Mother:—This finds us in a French village now. I wrote you while in South Hampton, England, also mailed you two postals before since leaving Camp Mills, Long Island, N. Y. Spent an unusually long time on ship, laid in the harbor of Halifax for one week before starting across for England. We unloaded near London where we took a train for South Hampton. After staying there a few days we crossed the English channel to Cherbourg, France. Then from there by rail to this little town. This is about the only kind of writing paper they have here. There are many other articles you cannot buy. The people here have their houses enclosed in a wall.
Seems like they build a wall around it before they build a house.

France is a beautiful country as well as England. A lot of the farming is still done in the old way; the farms look well kept. The French people are polite and try to make you comfortable. The French language of course is about all I hear now and I am trying to learn to speak it. The streets in nearly all the small towns in France are narrow and when passing through it seems like you are walking between two walls instead of between two rows of houses. Let me hear from home often. Will close with love to all.

Writes on Board Ship.

Sgt. Walter Stone, of Co. A. 1st Pioneer Infantry No. 1907955, has landed in France ere this letter.
He is the son of Mrs. T. D. Stone, of Glen Dean, Ky.

Dear Mother:—I am France bound.
I am going in good spirits and I don't want you to worry about me.
I'll be back some day to tell the story of "Over There." Tell Ernest Pool to have those metals ready for I believe I'll be the guy that will get the Kaiser, ha, ha! This leaves me well and feeling fine. All the Breckinridge boys are in good spirits.
Tell all my friends hello and goodbye for me. Tell Amy and Edwin to study hard and learn lots this school.

I am out on board the ship now.
I am going to do my bit. Remember us boys when you pray. Mother write me often and I'll write as often as possible.

I am your son,
Walter W. Stone.

Likes the Pretty Mountain Girls.

Here is another one of the boys in service. The following letter is from Ira D. Stone, son of Mrs. C. W.
Stone, of McDaniels, who seems to be charmed with the East. The epistle is dated from Hohoken, N. J.

Dear Home Folks:—We arrived safely at the docks on the Hudson, at Hohoken, N. J., will stay here tonight, tomorrow at six o'clock we will take a launch boat and cross the Hudson, then take a train for our new camp. This trip has been full of interest to me—in fact the most interesting trip of my life. We came over the Alleghany mountain which was simply delightful. The dirt roads as well as the railroads through the mountains are in first class condition, and the air was so fine that I believe I could live on it without anything else. If I had thought to have brought a jug I would have filled it with that good air and sent it to you, ha, ha! And besides there were so many pretty mountain girls some of them told me they were coming over to camp, Sunday.

I have been in five states since I left Camp Taylor, Ky. Indiana, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania and
New Jersey. I think I will get to see New York City, tomorrow, and Brooklyn Bridge, too.

My Corporal and I are now sitting on the docks with a plank on our knees writing. There are several small boats anchored just in front of us and we can see several out in the river. I have already written a letter and a card today, guess you will get them all at once. Wrote a letter at daylight this morning before the train left Cleveland, then a card at noon, now one after dark at Hoboken, N. J. I call that going some, ha, ha!

We have only been off the train
twice since we left Camp Sherman; once at Scranton, N. J., and paraded around one square and again at Elmira for refreshments which was served by the Red Cross girls. I certainly can't say too much for the Red Cross Organization. Well as it is twenty minutes till twelve, I will close and go to my cot and try to sleep some. By-byl

ROYAL SCANDAL IN AUSTRIA MAY LEAD TO DIVORCE

People Growing Bitter Against Emperor and Empress.

BLAME THEM FOR DISASTER

Empress is Accused of Shielding Italians—Emperor Received With Catcalls and Curses When He Appeared on Street—Inspired Denial of Rumors Says Czernin Knew of Sixtus' Peace Letter.

A few months ago several official or semi-official denials were made regarding charges against Emperor Charles of Austria and his wife, Empress Zita. What these charges refer to is becoming known by degrees. The Austrian censorship has so far prevented a full statement reaching the wires in neutral countries, but the news is filtering through of a scandal in the imperial palace which is likely to lead to a divorce.

The empress is accused of shielding and protecting the Italians. The disaster on the Plave was the result of a plot engineered by Empress Zita, the people believe. In Vienna the excitement of the people knows no bounds. When the emperor appears in the streets he is received with catcalls and curses. Recently a man ran after the automobile in which the ruler was driving, calling out: "Die upon thee, Parma!"

Empress Zita is a daughter of the house of Parma, one of the royal families formerly reigning over parts of Italy. Zita's brothers are accused of betraying Austria. There is no end of denials coming from official sources. These denials, proclaimed even from ministerial benches in parliament, show the seriousness of the situation caused by the reports, rumors and gossip affecting the imperial family. While some of the reports no doubt are extravagant the Austrian people insist that where there is smoke one is bound to find fire.

Divorce Thought Imminent.
The first Swiss newspaper which prints anything about the scandal in the Hofburg, aside from the official denials which were enabled to fill parts of the world, is the Thurgauer Zeitung. It says:

"According to semi-official and press reports coming from Vienna, there are sinister rumors and accusations regarding the imperial family about in Austria and Hungary. In these rumors scenes are mentioned which are said to have taken place in the imperial palace. These scenes are alleged to be the forerunners of a divorce that would sever the marital relations of Charles and Zita. The great mass of the people hold the imperial couple responsible for the defeat suffered on the Italian front. Emperor Charles and his wife, Zita, are said to have forbidden the use of stifling gases and flame throwers for the offensive in Italy. Italian prisoners of war are receiving preferential treatment, it is charged.

"Other members of the imperial family are not spared. They also are accused of being implicated in dark plots. Two brothers of Empress Zita, Princes Sixtus and Xavier of Parma, are singled out as most dangerous conspirators. The fact that they were in the enemy's country during the war and the part they played in the affair of the emperor's peace letter are being brought up against them.

"The excitement is growing in Vienna. It is reported, leading to an incident in the streets of the capital where a man ran after the imperial automobile, shouting: 'Die, Parma!' The emperor was at that time being driven from his palace at Schoenbrunn to the Hofburg. Finally the reports and rumors became so widespread and dangerous in their character that both governments, in Vienna and Budapest, were compelled to publish denials and 'corrections' in the newspapers. Besides, the charges were officially denied in the Hungarian parliament, and Dr. von Seydler, the Austrian premier, referred to the accusations in a speech delivered at a reception to the Austrian deputies and at a meeting at the Vienna city hall.

Allies Blamed for Gossip.
"A semi-official announcement sent out by the Vienna correspondence bureau says the reports concerning the imperial family were disseminated by the entente powers as part of a propaganda offensive, for the purpose of creating unrest and disturbances in the monarchy. In the Hungarian house of deputies Prime Minister Wekerle made a vigorous speech in which he dealt the truth of all aspersions cast upon the emperor and empress. He called all these reports false, lying, impossible and unthinkable. His remarks led to an enthusiastic ovation pledging loyalty to the imperial couple on the part of the house.

"The most minute 'correction' was given out by Doctor Funder, editor in chief of the Reichspost, who addressed a great Catholic mass meeting in the Vienna city hall. Doctor Funder attempted to explain away certain incidents in connection with the emperor's peace letter. There is no doubt that he spoke authoritatively, after consulting the highest authorities. The most important part of Doctor Funder's statement no doubt is his disclosure regarding Count Czernin's connection with the emperor's peace letter. Doctor Funder maintained Count Czernin not only had known of this letter, but even had caused the emperor to write it. This is in conflict with all previous declarations. Doctor Funder said:

"I want to refer to two of the rumors because they are repeated in public with the greatest persistence, so much so that even some of our well meaning people believe them. One of these rumors concerns two brothers of Empress Zita, Prince Sixtus and Prince Xavier of Parma, both of whom are residing in a foreign country. Three brothers of the empress are serving in the Austro-Hungarian army, as is well known. It is not true if anyone says that the two other princes had gone over to the French side at the beginning of the war for the purpose of fighting against the central powers. As a matter of fact, both these princes asked to be enrolled in the Austro-Hungarian army at the beginning of the war. When they were refused permission they placed themselves at the disposal of the International Red Cross in Geneva to engage in charitable work.

Czernin Responsible.
"It is not true when it is said that the two princes returned to Austria once or on several occasions to meet their families and confer with them. The story of their holding a conference somewhere in Styria or elsewhere is false. It is true they were in Austria twice without seeing their families. They came because Count Czernin had called them. And Count Czernin had called them because he thought they could be used in clearing the path for peace negotiations.

"Our enemies rejected all efforts made by the princes, but that was not the latter's fault. In the same way the enemies have so far rejected all peace proposals made by statesmen of the central powers. At a time when the central powers had no diplomatic representatives in the countries of the enemies it was only natural to employ two personages standing so high as the two princes in the movement for bringing about peace. We all pray that this peace movement may be successful some day, and those who will bring it about will certainly be entitled to the thanks of all humanity.

"And just as resolutely another truth must be proclaimed again and again. The emperor's letter proposing peace negotiations was caused to be sent by Count Czernin, the responsible minister, who accepted the responsibility for its purpose and its contents. It was Count Czernin who selected Prince Sixtus to act the part of a messenger of peace. And whoever is of the opinion that Count Czernin was a statesman endowed with certain abilities must be convinced that Count Czernin could accept responsibility for causing the emperor to send his peace letter with the full weight of his personality. And in spite of this, what a variety of conclusions has been drawn from his resignation!"

In Memory of Mrs. Hendrick.

Sister Billy Hendrick was born in 1850, professed faith in Christ about the age of 23 years, and united with the Clover Creek Baptist church her life companion joining at the same time and they two walked together in the Lord's work until the end, in the love and fellowship of the dear old church.

Some few years ago Bro. Hendrick's body was laid away in the family burying ground; and on the 6th of Aug. 1918 they placed Sister Hendrick's body by his side, that two might rest together, from a well earned, strenuous life in the Master's service, until the resurrection morn.

Sister Hendrick's was 68 years old the last six months she was a great sufferer, but very patient, and trustful through it all, so, calm, and submissive. The way was the sweet grace of the Lord, made, bright for this child of his. Her one thought seemed to be the will of her "precious Lord," as she would often say. She like all mothers, wanted to stay longer with her children; but said to Isabelle, when she knew the Lord would take her, "I am perfectly resigned to meet my Lord I submit to him, and you must submit to my going." She loved the dear old songs of Zion, and during her suffering she would repeat the old songs, such as "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and the last words she spoke, she sang one "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross," verse of "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone." How glorious her going was! How precious the christian's hope! O precious cross! O Glorious crown! O resurrection day!

The Lord seemed very near her bed of affliction; she said she had prayed until she had brought Jesus to the foot of her bed, where she could lay her hand on him.

The writer was Bro. and Sister Hendrick's, pastor in the beginning of his ministry, for six years; their home was one of our homes. It was a good home for a young preacher, each member of the family were kind good, and encouraging to the Lord's servant.

She said to her children, "You will have more to die now for; be good, and when you get to Heaven, your Mother and Father will be there. Children left to miss Mother's sweet presence are; Mrs. J. W. Miller, Mrs. J. H. Miller, Mrs. Claude Mercer, Miss Isabelle Hendrick, Tice Hendrick, Gude Hendrick and Johnie Hendrick.

She, too, has entered into that rest with her dear husband; heaven must be more real, and brighter now to all her loved ones. What a glorious reunion awaits her children, and all her dear ones. "She fought a good fight, finished her course, and kept the faith," henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give her at that day and not to her only, but unto all them also that love His appearing. What a precious hope!

J. T. Lewis,
Trenton Baptist Church.

Obituary.

It was after a lingering illness that death claimed Mrs. Eliza Hendrick of whom it can be said that she was indeed a good woman, a loyal neighbor and a devoted mother. At about the age of twenty-five she made a profession of faith and united with the Clover Creek Baptist church, in which church she lived a death. Her doors were always open to its pastor and visitors. Although unable for several years to take an active part in her church and its work, she was intensely interested in its welfare and progress. To know her was to love her. She was a patient and submissive sufferer and when the end came she was prepared to meet the great master, Death, with a smile. And with confidence in her Savior she crossed to the other shore to be with Christ and all His Redeemed Hosts.

She shall be missed and long remembered by all who knew her. She leaves the following children: J. M. Hendrick, C. G. Hendrick, M. T. Hendrick, Mrs. J. W. Miller, Mrs. J. H. Miller, Mrs. Claude Mercer and Miss Isabelle Hendrick and a host of friends to mourn her loss.

Her remains were laid to rest near her home by the side of her husband in the Miller burying ground.

Preparing for Winter.

Indications pointing to a very high market for butter in the large eastern markets this winter have caused many farmers in this vicinity to prepare well for the winter feeding of their cows as the excessive price of butter will naturally cause the price of cream to be extremely high.

Interesting Letter
From San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal., August 8, 1918. Mr. John D. Babbage, Cloverport, Ky. Dear Mr. Babbage: Will you please change my address from P. O. Box 694 Los Angeles, Cal. to Room 717 Flood Bldg., San Francisco, Cal.

My transfer to this city as Special Agent in Charge, U. S. Department of Justice, from a similar position in Los Angeles, involves quite a promotion.

On assuming charge of the office here I found it in very cramped quarters consisting of five rooms in the Federal Building, as there was no more available room in the Federat Building, eleven rooms in the Flood Building were secured where we are now located. I have a force of thirty people under my direction and expect to increase it.

We are making it just as hot for Kaiserism as our wits will permit. Have been in charge here since July 15th. However, I was in San Francisco from June 1917 to April 1918 on special detail on a case of international interest.

The German Hindu Conspiracy Case. One hundred and five persons were named in the indictment, among them Alfred Zimmerman, the German Minister and Franz Bopp, German Consul of San Francisco, the later, with his entire force actually on trial. Many prominent local men and many prominent Hindus were also on trial. Of those actually on trial, thirty-two, and one escaped. He was a Los Angeles ship-builder. The trial lasted from November 20th to April 23rd.

The recent news items from the East concerning the terrific heat read almost like fairy tales to us here. A straw hat or a man without a waistcoat is almost a curiosity. A light overcoat at night especially if driving, is almost essential. As I write I am toasting my shins by a good fire in August.

Mrs. Blanford, the boys and I motored up from Los Angeles 460 miles. Just before leaving Los Angeles we motored to San Diego 130 miles. Such wonderful roads as we have in California. Hundreds of miles of asphalt and concrete roads as smooth as a floor and more building.

Everything here is sidetracked for war work. There is a large training camp, Camp Kearny, at San Delgo. There is also an aviation training station on North Island in San Diego Bay. Forts, training camps and aviation schools here are too numerous to mention. An aviation school was nearing completion near Los Angeles when I left. Let the good work go on.

One isn't in it without a uniform now. I tried my best to get in even with the family to consider. I was recommended for a captaincy to be assigned to intelligence work, by the Major in charge of the intelligence work for the Southern Department at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, but the chief of my bureau retain my present position.

I read the lists of Breckenridge county boys who are entering the service with a great deal of interest as well as all the news.

Kindest regards and best wishes to the News and all my Breckenridge county friends. Sincerely yours,

E. M. Blanford.

P. S. Lest some may think all California is in cold storage from my observation on the weather in San Francisco let them beware of the Imperial Valley, Needles and several other places where a temperature of 120 is common.

CHAPTER XX.

The Lincoln Penny.
And so, at last, King Otto the Ninth reached his palace, and was hurried up the stairs to the room where the council waited. Not at all a royal figure, but a tired little boy in gray trousers, a short black Eton coat, and a rolling collar which had once been white.

He gave one glance around the room. "My grandfather!" he said. And fell to crying into his dirty pocket-handkerchief.

The chancellor eyed grimly from under his shaggy brows the disreputable figure of his sovereign. Then he went toward him, and put his hand on his head.

"He was very eager for this rest, Otto," he said.

Then he knelt and very solemnly and with infinite tenderness, he kissed the small, not overclean, hand.

One by one the council did the same thing.

King Otto straightened his shoulders and put away the handkerchief. It had occurred to him that he was a man now and must act a man's part in the world.

"May I see him?" he asked. "I—didn't see him before."

"Your people are waiting, sire," the chancellor said gravely. "To a ruler, his people must come first."

And so, in the clear light from the room behind him, Otto the Ninth first stood before his people. They looked up, and hard eyes grew soft, tense muscles relaxed. They saw the erectness of the small figure, the steadiness of the blue eyes that had fought back their tears, the honesty and fire and courage of this small boy who was the king.

Let such of the revolutionists as remained scream before the parliament house. Let the flames burn and the drums beat. The solid citizens, the great mass of the people, looked up at the king and cheered mightily. But olution had that night received its death blow at the hands of a child. The mob prepared to go home to bed.

While King Otto stood on the balcony, down below in the crowd an American woman looked up, and suddenly caught her husband by the arm.

"Robert," she said, "Robert, it is Bobby's little friend!"

"Nonsense!" he retorted. "It's rather dramatic, isn't it? Nothing like this at home! See, they've crowned him already."

But Bobby's mother looked with the clear eyes of most women, and all mothers.

"They have not crowned him," she said, smiling, with tears in her eyes. "The absurd little king! They have forgotten to take off his paper crown!"

The dead king lay in state in the royal chapel. Tall candles burned at his head and feet, set in long black standards. His uniform lay at his feet, his cap, his sword. The flag of his country was draped across him. He looked very rested.

In a small private chapel nearby lay old Adelbert. They could not do him too much honor. He, too, looked rested, and he, too, was covered by the flag, and no one would have guessed that a part of him had died long before, and lay buried on a battlefield. It was, unfortunately, his old uniform that he wore. They had added his regimental flag to the national one, and on it they had set his shabby cap. He, too, might have been a king. There were candles at his head and feet, also; but alas, he had now no sword.

Thus it happened that old Adelbert the traitor lay in state in the palace, and that monks, in long brown robes, knelt and prayed by him. Perhaps he needed their prayers. But perhaps, in the great accounting, things are balanced up, the good against the bad. In that case, who knows?

The palace mourned and the palace rejoiced. Haeckel had told what he knew and the leaders of the terrorists were in prison. Some, in high places, would be hanged with a silken cord, as was their due. And others would be ethically disposed of. The way was not yet clear ahead, but the crisis was passed and safely.

Early in the evening, soon after he had appeared on the balcony, the court had sworn fealty to Otto the Ninth. He had stood on the dais in the throne room, very much washed and brushed by that time, and the ceremony had taken place. Such a shout from relieved throats as went up, such a clatter as swords were drawn from scabbards and held upright in the air.

"Otto!" they cried. And again, "Otto!"

The little king had turned quite pale with excitement.

Late in the evening Nikky Larisch went to the council room. The council had dispersed, and Mettlich sat alone. When Nikky was announced he frowned. Then, very faintly, he smiled. But he was stern enough when the young soldier entered. Nikky came to the point at once.

"I have come," he said, "to know what I am to do, sir."

"Do?" asked the chancellor, coldly.

"Whether the crown—whether the king is safe or not," said Nikky, looking dogged and not at all now like the picture of his mother. "I am guilty of—of all that happened."

The chancellor had meant to be very hard. But he had come through a great deal, and besides, he saw something Nikky did not mean him to see. He was used to reading men. He saw that the boy had come to the breaking point.

"Sit down," he said, "and tell me about it."

But Nikky would not sit. He stood, looking straight ahead, and told the story. He left nothing out, the scene on the roof, his broken promise.

"Although," he added, his only word of extenuation, "God knows I tried to keep it."

Then the message from Countess Loschek, and his long wait in her boudoir, to return to the thing he had found. As he went on, the chancellor's hand touched a button.

"Bring here at once Countess Loschek," he said, to the servant who came. "Take two of the guard, and bring her."

Then, remembering the work he had to do, he took another sip of milk. "These things you have done," he said to Nikky. "And weak and wicked enough they are. But, on the other hand, you found the king."

"Others found him also. Besides, that does not affect my guilt, sir," said Nikky steadily.

Suddenly the chancellor got up and, going to Nikky, put both hands on his shoulders.

Quite to the end now, with the countess not in her rooms or anywhere in the palace. With the bonfires burned to cold ashes, and the streets deserted. With the police making careful search for certain men whose names Haeckel had given, and tearing frenzied placards from the walls. With Miss Braithwaite still lying in her drugged sleep, watched over by the sisters who had cared for the dead king, and with Karl, across the mountains, dreaming of a bride who would never be his.

Quite to the end. Only a word or two now, and we may leave the little king to fulfill his splendid destiny. Not a quiet life, we may be certain. Perhaps not a very peaceful or untroubled one. But a brave and steadfast and honorable one, be sure of that.

What should we gain by following Olga Loschek, eating her heart out in England, of the committee of ten, covering in its cells? They had failed, as the wicked, sooner or later, must fail. Or Karl, growing fat in a prosperous land, all greedy for conquest and too indolent for battle?

To finish the day, then, and close with midnight.

Nikky first, a subdued and rather hattered Nikky. He was possessed by a desire, not indeed unknown to lovers, to revisit the place where he and Hedwig had met before. The roof—no less. Not even then that he hoped for himself any more than he had hoped before. But at least it could not be Karl.

Strangely enough, Hedwig also had had a fancy to visit the roof. She could not sleep.

So she had dismissed her maid and gone through Hubert's rooms to the roof. Nikky found her there.

Hedwig did not turn her head. She knew his steps, and really known he must come, since she was calling him, actually calling, with all her determined young will. Oh, she was shameless!

But now that he had come, it was Nikky who implored, and Hedwig who held off.

"My only thought in all the world," he said. "Can you ever forgive me?" This was tactless. No lover should ever remind his lady that he has withstood her.

"For what?" said Hedwig coolly.

"For loving you so." This was much better, quite strategic, indeed. A trench gained!

"Do you really love me? I wonder."

But Nikky was tired of words, and rather afraid of them. They were not his weapons. He trusted more, as has been said somewhere else, in his two strong arms.

"Too much ever to let you go," he said. Which means nothing unless we take it for granted that she was in his arms. And she was, indeed.

The king having been examined and given some digestive tablets by the court physicians—a group which, strangely enough, did not include Doctor Welderman—had been given a warm bath and put to bed.

There was much formality as to the process now, several gentlemen clinging to their hereditary right to hang around and be nuisances during the ceremony. But at last he was left alone with Oskar.

Alone, of course, as much as a king is ever alone, which, what with extra sentries and so on, is not exactly solitary confinement.

"Oskar!" said the king from his pillow.

"Majesty!"

Oskar was gathering the royal garments, which the physicians had ordered burned, in case of germs.

"Did you ever eat American ice cream?"

"No, majesty. Not that I recall."

"It is very delicious," observed the king, and settled down in his sheets. He yawned, then sat up suddenly—"Oskar!"

"Yes, majesty!"

"There is something in my trousers pocket. I almost forgot it. Please bring them here."

Sitting up in bed, and under Oskar's disapproving eye, because he, too, was infected with the germ idea, King Otto the Ninth felt around in his small pockets, until at last he had found what he wanted.

"Have I a small box anywhere, a very small box?" he inquired.

"The one in which your majesty's seal ring came is here. Also there is one in the study which contained crayons."

"I'll have the ring box," said his majesty.

And soon the Lincoln penny rested on a cushion of white velvet, on which were the royal arms.

King Otto looked carefully at the penny and then closed the lid.

"Whenever I am disagreeable, Oskar," he said, "or don't care to study, or—do things that you think my grandfather would not have done, I wish you'd bring me this box. You'd better keep it near you."

He lay back and yawned again.

"Did you ever hear of Abraham Lincoln, Oskar?" he asked.

"I—I have heard the name, majesty," Oskar ventured cautiously.

"My grandfather thought he was a great man." His voice trailed off. "I—should—like—"

The excitements and sorrows of the day left him gently. He stretched his small limbs luxuriously, and half turned upon his face. Oskar, who hated disorder, drew the covering in stiff and geometrical exactness across his small figure, and tiptoed out of the room.

Some time after midnight the chancellor passed the guard and came into the room. There, standing by the bed, he prayed a soldier's prayer, and into it went all his hopes for his country, his grief for his dead comrade and sovereign, his loyalty to his new king.

King Otto, who was, for all the digestive tablets, not sleeping well, roused and saw him there, and sat upright at once.

"Is it morning?" he asked, blinking.

"No, majesty. Lie down and sleep again."

"Would you mind sitting down for a little while? That is, if you are not sleepy."

"I am not sleepy," said the chancellor, and drew up a great chair. "If I stay, will you try to sleep?"

"Do you mind if I talk a little? It may make me drowsy."

"Think if you like, majesty," said the old man.

King Otto eyed him gravely.

"Would you mind if I got on your knee?" he asked, almost timidly. In all his life no one had so held him, and yet Bobby, that very evening, had climbed on his father's knee as though it was very generally done. "I would like to try how it feels."

"Come, then," said the chancellor.

The king climbed out of bed and up on his lap. His chancellor reached over and dragged a blanket from the bed.

"For fear of a cold!" he said, and draped it about the little figure. "Now, how is that?"

"It is very comfortable. May I put my head back?"

Long, long years since the chancellor had sat thus, with a child in his arms. His sturdy old arms encircled the boy closely.

"I want to tell about running away," said the king, wide-eyed in the dusk. "I am sorry. This time I am going to promise not to do it again."

CHINESE HELP ALLIES IN WAR

Laborers Are Doing Great Work Behind Lines.

NEARLY 150,000 ARE THERE

Engaged in Making Ammunition, Constructing Buildings, Paving Roads, Loading and Unloading Ships and Trains and in All the Thousand and One War Industries—What the Yank is Doing for the Chinaman.

By ELOISE ROBINSON.

Since early in the war there have been numbers of Chinese with the French and British armies in France—not in the fighting line but in that enormous army of laborers which makes it possible to carry on the war. Nearly a hundred thousand of these are working with the British in northern France, and more than forty thousand more are scattered all over the country with the French. Now they are coming into the American lines in large numbers.

Most of these men come from northern and central China, and for the same reasons that many of our American boys came to France before the United States entered the war. Some of them were attracted by the high pay and the chance to better their own condition, some of them out of pure love of adventure, still others because of their appreciation of what this struggle means in their own future history.

And there are, too, not a few Chinese scholars and men of some distinction in their own country who have been forced to leave for political reasons, as well as young students from England or America. They are engaged in making ammunition, in the construction of buildings, in paving roads, in loading and unloading ships and trains—in all the thousand and one "war industries" that have directly and indirectly to do with the maintaining of the allied armies in France.

Lack of Understanding. Merely for the sake of efficiency it is of importance that a feeling of mutual understanding and sympathy should exist between the Yank and the Chinaman who has come to be his neighbor. Officials recognize its military value and have met with appreciation the efforts of the Y. M. C. A., which is carrying on the work in most of the camps where Chinese are located.

Most of the difficulties were due to lack of understanding. For instance, a quiet, hard-working Chinaman had some trouble with his eyes and was ordered to the only place where he could have protection from the light, which happened to be the guardhouse. No doubt the Yank tried to explain to him on the way just why he was being sent there, but his efforts were not noticeably successful. All that Ching Chinaman could comprehend, and all that his friends could comprehend was that he was being shut up in the "Hed Wu Tse" when he had committed no offense. Or, when the energetic doughboy wanted to hasten along the deliberate coolie he would wave his arms wildly in the air and, with the idiotic instinct we all have to believe that the man who does not speak our language is hard of hearing, yell at the top of his lungs.

"Come on, you fellows, let's go." Unfortunately, however, "go" in Chinese means dog, the laborers supposed they were being "bawled out" for some inexplicable reason, and there might have been trouble had not a "Y" secretary who had once been a missionary to China straightened things out. As it was, coolie and doughboy went off together with grins on their faces. Chinamen can appreciate a joke, as well as Yanks, and a new word was added to their vocabularies.

Anxious to Learn.

Some of the men have already picked up a considerable knowledge of French, and they are eager to learn English. Both American officers and enlisted men have volunteered to conduct classes in English.

Beyond the immediate benefit to the men themselves and their increased efficiency to the army, there is a larger benefit of this work with Ching Chinaman. After the war he is going home to the interior of China to be looked up to by his friends and relatives and by the whole community as a man of information and importance. He will be a leader in his village, and his word will carry weight. The engineers directing Chinese work will be among those to go to China to have a share in the great industrial development which is sure to come at the close of the war.

Unexpected Cash for Relatives of Miner Killed in Mishap.

Theodore Olson, a former employee of the Homestake mine in Lead, S. D., who in 1904 left the Black hills for the mining districts of the Southwest, has been dead for seven months, but his relatives and friends in the Black hills were not aware of his fate until recently.

Olson was killed in a mine accident in Arizona. The first knowledge his Black hills relatives had of his death was when they received a letter from an attorney in Arizona asking for information in regard to relatives, among whom about $4,000 is to be divided.

TONS OF MAIL SEIZED

Matter Is Held at Chicago in Great Sedition Plot.

Federal Agents With Search Warrants Swoop Down Upon Many German Propagandists.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—More than 2,000,000 letters and pamphlets have been seized by federal agents in a drive by the department of justice and the postal department to crush sedition. With the I. W. W. trial out of the way, government officials have let it be known that for months a close check has been kept on organizations and individuals charged with attempting to obstruct the draft and encourage sedition in the United States. It is said, was to give the secret service men a list of scores of individuals who should be placed on the suspected list. The government also is said to have obtained the names of practically all the German propagandists in the country.

The socialist party, the I. W. W., and the International Italian club are declared by government agents to be the chief offenders in the campaign of obstruction that has been waged against government aims. One result of the raids, it is said, was to give the secret service men a list of scores of individuals who should be placed on the suspected list. The government also is said to have obtained the names of practically all the German propagandists in the country.

LONG LIVE THE KING.

"Make the promise to yourself, majesty. It is the best way."

"I will. I intend to be a very good king."

"God grant it, majesty."

"Like Abraham Lincoln?"

"Like Abraham Lincoln," said the chancellor gravely.

The king, for all his boasted wakefulness, yawned again, and squirmed closer to the old man's breast.

"And like my grandfather," he added.

"God grant that, also."

This time it was the chancellor who yawned, a yawn that was half a sigh. He was very weary, and very sad.

Suddenly, after a silence, the king spoke: "May a king do anything he wants?"

"Not at all," said the chancellor hastily.

"But, if it will not hurt the people? I want to do two things, or have two things. They are both quite easy." His tone was anxious.

"What are they?"

"You wouldn't like to promise first, would you?"

The chancellor smiled in the darkness.

"Good strategy, but I am an old soldier, majesty. What are they?"

"First, I would like to have a dog; one to keep with me."

"I—probably that can be arranged."

"Thank you. I do want a dog. And—"

"Yes, majesty?"

"I am very fond of Nikky," said the king. "And he is not very happy. He looks sad, sometimes. I—I would like him to marry Hedwig, so we can all be together the rest of our lives."

The chancellor hesitated. But, after all, why not? He had followed ambition all his life, and where had it brought him? An old man, whose only happiness lay in this child in his arms. "Perhaps," he said gently, "that can be arranged also."

The night air blew softly through the open windows. The little king smiled, contentedly, and closed his eyes.

"I'm getting rather sleepy," he said.

"But if I'm not too heavy, I'd like you to hold me a little longer."

"You are not too heavy, majesty."

Soon the chancellor, worn not with one day, but with many, was nodding.

Finally They Both Slept.

His eyes closed under his fierce eyebrows. Finally they both slept. The room was silent.

Something slipped out of the little king's hand and rolled to the floor. It was the box containing the Lincoln penny.

How this clothing business can serve

It's only natural that every business man should want to keep his business going; it's important that he should. But there's a far greater consideration than just selling.

This war has got to be won, and in this business of ours, we feel that any clothes selling that stands in the way of that outcome is decidedly unpatriotic.

That's why we say "take care of the clothes you have; make them wear longer."

That's why we say "when you do need clothes, get only those that last long; those that save resources for the country because you buy less often."

In Hart Schaffner & Marx clothes we feel that we're offering the greatest clothes saving because they give the most month by month wear for every dollar invested.

Freak of a Corn Stalk.

Mr. Lafayette Tindle, who lives on the A. A. Miller farm near Cloverport certainly takes the blue ribbon for perfecting a stalk of corn. Mr. Tindle says he has a stalk of corn in his corn field, which has nine perfect ears of corn on it; by perfect ears, he means long ones with the grains fully developed. When a stalk is not supposed to produce more than three or four ears of corn, it is no wonder this one appears freakish enough for the neighbors to come from miles around to see it.
